

Circular Economy Policy

Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to establish the commitments to advance a fair and sustainable energy transition based on the Circular Economy, as part of the solution to the global challenges of our Society, such as: resource scarcity, waste management, climate change, biodiversity loss and environmental deterioration.

Our Commitments

- Promote Circular Economy by keeping materials in circulation for as long as possible taking advantage of the potential resources contained in waste and reducing the need to extract new materials replacing (part of) them.
- Promote industrial symbiosis between facilities, companies, administrations, academic institutions and civil society by encouraging the exchange of raw materials, services and products (such as water and steam).
- Promote reintegration of waste into the value chain, avoiding elimination when possible, prioritizing recovery.
- Promote efficient management of resources, including water, favoring regeneration, recycling, reuse and withdrawal reduction.
- Promote and drive initiatives in Circular Economy by establishing and monitoring objectives as well as identifying opportunities for improvement.
- Promote research and innovation in sustainable alternatives to conventional raw materials, as well as in the design and implementation of clean production that optimize the use of resources, emissions and impacts on nature.
- Promote circular alternatives for materials resulting from the modification or closure of our activities.
- Promote responsible consumption through the choice of suppliers and the acquisition of products or services, considering their environmental impact.
- Contribute to the creation and sharing of knowledge about circular economy transition sharing good practices and innovative solutions.
